The weather about the State House in Montpelier is quite squally.

The World's Fair at St. Louis goes out in a blaze of pyrotechnics, grand enough to fit the magnificence of the exhibition.

A man has just been discharged from Chittenden county jail after being confined there since last July on the charge of robbery. We read that he "was much pleased at getting his liberty again." Little wonder that he was pleased. One in his position might easily have imagined that he was incarcerated for life. Without having been convicted on the charge of robbery and without even having had the privilege of a hearing, this man served a sentence of over four months.

WITH RETURNING MEMORY.

Memory came back to the legislature yesterday. They suddenly remembered that the most important exaction required of them by the people of the state was that they should keep down as much as possible the expenses of the state. The word "retrenchment" came back to them in its full meaning. And acting on the regained memory they set to work. First the bill to increase the salary of supreme court judges from $3,000 to $3,500 annually, with actual expenses thrown in, was killed. The proposal to increase the salary of the chief executive of the state from $1,500 to $2,500 was the next to come up. Without ceremony the House refused to increase the salary to $2,000 and finally the members ended up by killing the measure. Bills to increase the emoluments of the probate districts of Manchester and Bennington were similarly treated. The supreme court judges, governor, etc., will continue to worry along on the old stipend, and they will probably do it without much effort. We are pleased to see that returning memory has come to the legislature. How much better it would have been had the members been mindful of the wishes of the people all the time, without a lapse! The state of Vermont might have been thousands of dollars richer had this streak of economy come over the legislature at the early part of the session, before certain appropriations had been made, notably that of $60,000 for a building at the State Agricultural college.

FULFILLING A PARTY PLEDGE.

After much pulling and hauling and turning inside and out, not to mention a vast amount of bickering, the Republican party has finally carried out one of the planks of its last platform—it has adopted a measure to govern the conduct of caucuses. We say the Republican party has fulfilled one of its pledges for the caucus law which passed the second branch of the legislature yesterday afternoon was not the offspring of the Democratic party. In fact every effort was put forth by the minority party to defeat this measure. We do not wish to impugn the motives of the 27 Democrats who voted against the bill in the House yesterday, any more than we would impugn the motives of the 42 Republicans who voted with the Democrats against the passage of the bill. The same reason which actuated the latter may have actuated the former—the belief that this somewhat complex system of caucus government was not what the situation demanded. They may have had perfectly honest motives in combating the measure and voting solidly against it. Excepting one representative who classes himself as an Independent Democrat, every single Democrat in the House voted against the bill. It cannot be said that the minority party was in any way concerned in the passing of the measure. It was solely Republican. If the measure is found to be meritorious then the Republican party must be given the credit for having placed it on the statute books. If, on the contrary, it prove inadequate and bungling, the the Republican party must take the blame. Yet the charge of insincerity in its platform, so often made against this dominating party in Vermont, cannot with right be used in this connection for the next two years. The product of its sincerity may be practically valueless. Still the Republican party has gone a long way to make good a promise, the fulfillment of which has been so earnestly desired.

CURRENT COMMENT.

What the Press of the State and Country Is Talking About.

An act imposing a limit upon municipal indebtedness was one of the promises of the Republican state platform, and nobody at Montpelier yet appears to have given the matter a thought.—St. Albans Messenger.

Old Times and New.

Even the Archbishop of Canterbury can't resist the temptation to publish a book in connection with his visit to America. But things have changed since the days of Mrs. Trollope and Tom Moore.—Baltimore American.

Lonesomeness of Honesty.

The New York World says that an honest man with $100,000 a year can live very comfortably in New York. But would he want to live there, and wouldn't an honest man with that much money be awfully lonesome?—Washington Post.

Difficult to Change the Map.

The expected proposal to move the capital from Montpelier has not appeared thus far at this session of the legislature. In this line it is interesting to note that South Dakota had a capital fight on this year when the state voted a proposal to move the capital from Pierre, where it is now located, to Mitchell which is nearer the present center of population. After a bitter contest in which thousands of dollars were spent in behalf of both places the old capital, Pierre, won by a majority of 10,000 on the popular vote. It's a hard job to change the map.—Bennington Banner.

GRANITEVILLE.

The Graniteville Glee club had their first sleigh ride of the season last evening. They celebrated the occasion by going to see their former member, Malcolm F. McLeay, at his place of residence near Chelsea. They were royally entertained by Mr. McLeay and everybody thoroughly enjoyed himself. They returned during the small hours of the morning.

The M. W. A. cribbage team was defeated for the first time of the season by the C. O. F. team Wednesday evening by 175 points. The M. W. A. team plays the F. of A. team tonight. Poles for electric wires have been erected on Pearl street. Three of the houses on this street have already been wired.

The dancing school to be held under Prof. Elmore at Miles' hall will start tomorrow evening at 7 o'clock.

The regular meeting of St. Sylvester court, W. C. O. F., will be held Monday evening at 7 o'clock, at which time the election of officers for the ensuing year will take place. All members are requested to be present.

yet the statement was made boldly on the floor of the House.

The governor has designated Dr. J. A. Mead of Rutland and Perley F. Hazen, superintendent of the Fairbanks' Scale works at St. Johnsbury as delegates from Vermont to the national convention of state sealers which will meet at Washington, January 16.

Through the resignation of Representative Fitts to become attorney general, Mr. Miles of Barre has been promoted to the chairmanship of the House judiciary committee. The new member of the committee is Mr. Lewis of Troy. Mr. Fitts' place on the ways and means committee is taken by Mr. Darling of Hardwick, and Mr. Herriek of Highgate succeeds the late Mr. Hurlbut of Georgia.

A Brattleboro grade crossing was the matter which occupied a large portion of the time of the House yesterday afternoon. The steam railroads wanted the Brattleboro Street Railroad Company, which wishes to build a line to Hinsdale, N. H., and must cross the steam tracks, to go under or over, not at grade. Mr. Fitts of Brattleboro, the introducer of the bill fought against an amendment prohibiting the street railroad's crossing at grade and won out. The bill finally passed.

The difficulty between the governor and the legislative branch of the state government was not lessened yesterday afternoon when the Senate took up the bill passed by the House in the forenoon, requiring the governor to make the appointment of an inspector of finance on the advice and consent of the Senate. The bill was reported favorably. It was read the first, second and third times, by a suspension of the rule, on motion of Senator Lord of Washington county. Without discussion the bill was then passed. It went to the governor without delay.
